As professional education, legal education equips law students for fulfilling different roles in society and discharging various law jobs. The range and scope of which is always expanding in the modern democratic society; for example- Policymakers, lawyers, law teachers, administrators, etc. Accordingly, it is realized in modern India that legal education ought to have breadth.

Basic knowledge of the law has become necessary for all those who are engaged in administration, trade or industry. “A citizen to be effective in the enjoyment of his civic capacities needs basic knowledge of at least some aspects of the law. Officials and others who perform important law roles, e.g., a policeman, businessmen or politicians, need an understanding of parts of the law and its underlying policies and values.” Concluding his valedictory address he said in such a changing society with modernization at its peak, there is a need to improve legal education and expand its scope. There is a need to increase its ambit and for that, it is necessary, that legal education is not limited only to the study of law and legislation, but to the study of various procedures of law.

Smt Pushpalatha Jaganath, Chief Guest spoke in this occasion and appreciated the interest of law students in extracurricular activities. Student’s involvement in sports, cultural activities relieves them from stress. Along with studies one should also indulge in stress relieving activities. Speaking on law and legal education she said, Law is important for a society as it serves as a norm of conduct for its citizens. Liberally, legal education serves the society by imparting law students’ general and cultural education, making them good law-abiding citizens. Such legal education instills the significance and relevance of democratic culture in the students. Law, legal education and development have become interrelated concepts in modern developing societies, which are struggling to develop into social welfare states and are seeking to ameliorate the socio-economic condition of the people by peaceful means. The same is true for our country. It is a crucial function of legal education to produce lawyers with a social vision in a developing country. Concluding her speech she said legal knowledge is very important both in administration and also imparting justice. One should have the knowledge of law for the survival of society and his own.
